

Title: SOMETHING GOOD

Writer/Director: Kenneth Chapman

Genre: Teen Romance

Something Good

Proposed Budget: $100-200K

Location: Wellington

Logline: When Allison (17), a strong-minded and ambitious musician reluctantly accepts to entertain Jerome (17) for the day, a hopeless romantic rugby player and family friend she's never met who's moving in next door, they get to know each other very quickly and after a day of running errands for Allison's sisters, exploring the city and meeting friends, they both start to fall in love.

Something Good is my love letter to the city of Wellington. It's in the vein of Before Sunrise but with the teen factor and adventure of Ferris Bueller's Day Off. Filled with a dream soundtrack of my favourite New Zealand artists with everyone from Crowded House and Bic Runga to Lorde, Eva Prowse and Yumi Zouma and a contemporary dance sequence to Fur Patrol's Lydia, Something Good is a very love affirmative teen story with a strong New Zealand cultural flavor filled with universal themes about first love and family dynamics as well as the current teen culture. My aim for Something Good is to make a film about teens that New Zealand teenagers and adults will fall in love with because it's filled with relatable characters and scenarios that they'll want to revisit making it both extremely New Zealand based but globally accessible.

ALLISON (17): Obsessed with Chopin and carrying ambitious plans for a career in music, Allison reluctantly accepts to entertain Jerome when her older sister Katie demands to have the house to herself and her boyfriend while their parents are out of town for the weekend.

JEROME (18): Moving to Wellington from a small town to help with his rugby prospects, Jerome falls more and more in love with Allison the more he sees her with her family and friends.

GEORGIA (15): Allison's younger sister, Georgia is a dancer who takes advantage of the fact that Allison has the keys to their parents' car. Allison and Jerome act as a free taxi to Georgia and her friend at various points in the day.

AMY (15): Georgia's identical twin sister. An extremely hard working and promising basketball player who meets Jerome when Allison takes him to watch one of her games.
